Lee Dragu, director, Searching for Maxy, documentary (June 16, ICR)

This introduction to Romanian artist M.H. Maxy documents retrospectives from the Kunsthal Museum in Holland and the Bauhaus in Germany. Told through the eyes of the artist’s great-nephew, this documentary traces Maxy’s footsteps through Berlin, where he was part of Arthur Segal’s school in 1922, to the present day Bauhaus in Dessau. Whereas a number of Maxy's contemporaries gained notoriety when they left Romania, Maxy did not emigrate. He remained in his homeland and continues to be one of the most important Romanian artists. Yet he is virtually unknown in the West. This documentary aims to pull back the artistic iron curtain that has kept him obscure outside Romania by providing an entertaining look at some of the artist's work and encouraging more scholarly investigation and discourse.

Poarta Albă, feature film, 2014, directed by Nicolae Mărgineanu (June 16, ICR)

During the 1950s, two young people arrive in a place of no return: Poarta Albă, one of forced labor camps on the Danube-Black Sea Canal. A dramatic new world of endless torture and humiliation opens for them. Among prisoners there are professors, lawyers, poets, philosophers, peasants, artists, and scientists. Little by little the inmates realize that the forced labor they endure was not meant to link the Danube River to the Black Sea, but rather to create a site of organized suffering for all those whom the communist regime wanted to exterminate. The movie takes inspiration from Vărul Alexandru, a book by Adrian Oprescu. The screening will be followed by Q & A with director Nicolae Mărgineanu.

Lavinia Stan and Diane Vancea, eds., Post-Communist Romania at 25: Lessons in Democratization. Rowman & Littlefield, 2015 (C6, Wednesday, 17 June, 16:00-17:45)

Year 2014 marked the 25th anniversary of the collapse of communist regimes in Eastern Europe. The events of 1989 ushered in new all-encompassing changes in almost all areas of life. In few other places were reforms more contested and divisive than in Romania, a country that suffered greatly under the dictatorship of Nicolae Ceausescu, faced the region’s only bloody anti-communist revolt, and as such had the longest to travel on the road to democracy. We now have a generation’s worth of experience with these wrenching reforms that have deeply affected Romania’s political institutions and political culture, and ultimately allowed it to become a member of the European Union. This volume gathers key lessons for democratic theory and practice from Romania’s first 25 years of post-communist transition. Chapters are authored by Monica Ciobanu, Radu Cinpoes, Dennis Deletant, Tom Gallagher, Peter Gross, Ron King, Mihaela Miroiu, Paul E. Sum, Vladimir Tismâneanu, Diane Vancea, and Katherine Verdery, among others.

Roland Clark, Holy Legionary Youth: Fascist Activism in Interwar Romania. Cornell University Press, 2015 (BM1, Thursday, 18 June, 18:00-19:00)

Founded in 1927, Romania’s Legion of the Archangel Michael was one of Europe’s largest and longest-lived fascist social movements. In Holy Legionary Youth, Roland Clark draws on oral histories, memoirs, and substantial research in the archives of the Romanian secret police to provide the most comprehensive account of the Legion in English to date. Clark approaches Romanian fascism by asking what membership in the Legion meant to young Romanian men and women. Viewing fascism “from below,” as a social category that had practical consequences for those who embraced it, he shows how the personal significance of fascism emerged out of Legionaries’ interactions with each other, the state, other political parties, families and friends, and fascist groups abroad. Official repression, fascist spectacle, and the frequency and nature of legionary activities changed a person’s everyday activities and relationships in profound ways.
Moldovan writers were tasked with adapting a foreign literary model, Socialist Realism, to the local cultural context. From the creation of the first literary organization of the Moldovan Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic (MASSR) in 1924 until the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991, Soviet Moldovan writers, and “creative intellectuals” more generally, had to forge cultural values (around an allegedly distinct literary language and the invention of a local cultural heritage) that would legitimize the Moldovan “socialist nation.” These tasks imposed by the Soviet regime generated certain tensions and compromises among the writers themselves (and the various groups in the Moldovan Writers’ Union); between the writers and the representatives of Soviet power (both central and local); and between writers and the target audience for their literary production.

At the end of World War II, Stalin forged the communist regimes in Eastern Europe as satellites of the Soviet Union. After ten hard years of Soviet Stalinism, with the change introduced by the 20th Congress of the CPSU, the leaderships of satellites' communist parties risked to be overthrown by their internal rivals. In 1956, Party Secretary Gheorghe Gheorghiu-Dej converted Romania into a Stalinist system guided by Romanians: to stall change, he recovered previously ostracized national elite members and intellectuals. While presenting itself as communist, the regime increasingly used nationalism to create a domestic anti-Soviet consensus. After 1965, Nicolae Ceaușescu continued and augmented this strategy, dramatically expanding the reach of the propaganda machine into lives of the Romanians. The discourse on national history was manipulated and falsified for political ends. The book shows that the Romanian culture was subservient to the maintenance of the political system for over forty years and details the consequences of this forced regimentation after the demolition of the Berlin Wall.
This collection of essays gathers the works of the Third International Conference organized by The Center for Research and Professional Development “Romanian Studies in International Context” (STUR) in 2014 at Ovidius University of Constanța. Matei Vișniec was also awarded the title of Doctor Honoris Causa of Ovidius University, so the first volume celebrates this academic event. Several international scholars who conducted research on his oeuvre honor the world famous Romanian-French writer in a multilingual volume that reflects the international academic interest on Vișniec’s works. The second volume offers various perspectives on the complex and intimate interferences between the investigated fields, and their impact on contemporary aesthetic sensibility. This volume also reflects an interdisciplinary and international perspective.

Dragos Petrescu, Entangled Revolutions. The Breakdown of the Communist Regimes in East-Central Europe. Bucharest: Editura Enciclopedică, 2014. (BM5, Thursday, 18 June, 18:00-19:00)

When examining the 1989 events, which led to the breakdown of communism in Poland, Hungary, East Germany, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, and Romania, one must address the timing, sequence and nature of those events. Why did those events occur in 1989? Why did the communist regimes collapse in that particular order? Why were the events not violent, except in Romania? To explain the timing, sequence, and nature of the revolutions, this book employs a model-building approach and proposes an explanatory model which considers both domestic developments and the entangled histories of the Soviet Bloc countries between 1945 and 1989. The collapse of communist rule was provoked by the intricate and unexpected interplay of structural, conjectural and nation-specific factors, which ultimately determined the timing, sequence, and nature of those events.

This 1996 book, published in the U.S. under the title Mass Media in Revolution and Development. The Romanian Laboratory (Iowa State University Press), explores the beginnings of the post-1918 media and their roles in those first formative post-Communist years. A new introduction and an additional chapter were added, the latter examining the contemporary iteration of Romania's mass media and its shortcomings, and re-examining the lessons suggested in the original volume.

Presentation of art installation:

Raluca Bejan, United We Save: A Visual Story of Diasporic Mobilizing. (BM7, Thursday, 18 June, 18:00-19:00)

This exhibit visually documents the Toronto-based diaspora mobilizing in solidarity with Roșia Montană, Romania’s oldest mining settlement. It gained public momentum due to local and global uprisings fighting against an open pit gold mining project pursued by the Canadian corporation Gabriel Resources Ltd. The Toronto based United We Save movement, gathered a group of Romanian Canadians and allies opposing the project. In November 2013 the Romanian Senate rejected the draft bill allowing Gabriel Resources to start the Roșia Montană project, and subsequently Parliament voted down amendments to the mining law. Exclusively presenting imagery from Toronto's movement, the exhibit is a form of protest in itself, politicizing spectatorship by shedding light on Roșia Montană and re-imagining mobilizing as successful citizenry and political engagement. Images were captured by protestors themselves. Printed on canvas via heat transfer sheets and accompanied by a short narration, the imagery resembles protest banners. United We Save represents the portraits as collectively constructed individual images, in order to symbolically blur the line between individualism and collectivism, and draw attention to public ability to collectively change societies.

Plenary Session I - On Women, Feminism, and Democracy in Romania (Prof. Mihaela Miroiu, introduced by Prof. Maria Bucur)
Wednesday, June 17, 18:00-19:00 [Location: FSPUB, P.P. Negulescu Room]

In my view, feminism is the road towards women’s autonomy. This road restarted after 1989, simultaneously with the democratization process. In my talk, I reconstruct the history and analyze the relevance of feminism as an intellectual, civic, and political tool for women’s participation and recognition. Communism was a state patriarchy, inimical to other „isms,” including feminism. It was a road to women’s economic independence. The state was involved in children’s raising, but created its own gender hierarchies, confiscated women’s reproductive capacities, and used an irrelevant quota system for women’s political interests. During the 1990s women increasingly became private actors with very low political representation levels characterized by left-wing conservatism. It was the time when modern patriarchy was created but also when it was possible to build new research fields with a feminist approach, create NGOs, and influence politicians. The next seven years were dedicated to complying with the EU acquis communautaire. Romanian women formally became the beneficiaries of political room-service feminism. Feminism gained more recognition in universities, media, and politics. By late 2007, Romania became a liberal democracy. After the country joined the EU, politicians no longer felt the need to show commitment to democratic standards. Democracy was reduced to an electoral democracy and women’s political representation declined. Women rights NGOs became more active in street protests. Feminism diversified, from the initial liberal variant to the diverse new orientations visible today in the social media: socialist feminism, radical feminism, lesbian feminism. Romanian feminists thus have compressed the second and the third Western feminist waves in a very short time in order to be contemporary with our own her/story.

Plenary Session II - Romania’s Commitment to Reform? (Prof. Dennis Deletant, introduced by Prof. Paul Michelson)
Friday 19 June, 16:00-17:00 [Location: FSPUB, P.P. Negulescu Room]

Twenty-five years ago, I shared the prediction of Silviu Brucan, made in an interview with the editor of Le Figaro on 22 January 1990, that “it would take Romanians twenty years to learn democracy”. Whereas Ceauşescu succeeded in uniting Romanians in opposition to him, his overthrow threw them into confusion. The legacy of totalitarian rule in Romania was therefore markedly different from that elsewhere. A major legacy of communist rule in Romania was legal confusion. After 1990, the five-year economic plan was abandoned and a ‘jungle’ economy emerged in which the principal elements were the accumulation of capital and the formation of new economic and political elites. Major obstacles in the path of Romania’s progress towards economic development and bureaucratic efficiency have been and continue to be a lack of professionalism and widespread incompetence in the public domain. Romania took up little more than 12 percent of the 19.6 billion euros in EU Structural and Cohesion funds it was eligible to receive in the 2007-2013 budget cycle.
Despite significant increases in Romania’s ability to absorb European cohesion funds (up to a 30 percent rate by the end of 2013), the country still has the lowest absorption rate in the EU.
This failure to take advantage of EU money obviously slows down the implementation of measures required under the acquis communautaire. Corruption remains a significant problem. Anti-corruption campaigners who were previously fierce critics of the part played by the security services in generating and harbouring corruption now applaud their diligence in rooting it out. Yet the confession in September 2014 of a leading television political pundit that he was an under-cover military intelligence officer reveals an alarming anomaly in a state that purports to uphold democratic norms. The anomaly rests in the fact that an officer of a Romanian intelligence agency takes a strongly partisan political stance in the chat-show that he hosts and thereby seeks to influence the views of the electorate. Good government still eludes Romania. I have always been mindful of the dictum “we should never make the perfect the enemy of the good” but this does not justify the cognitive dissonance exhibited by many in government in Romania over the last quarter-century that is reflected in denials that a problem exists. Some politicians now respect the power of the DNA (the anti-corruption agency), the application of the law, and the vigilance of the press. Many do not. Corruption and autocratic impulses have characterized the attitudes and actions of successive governments and the bureaucracy since the revolution. Major progress has been made over the last two years in the drive against corruption in the ranks of the political and business elites. Addressing the other flaws in the public domain will require a concerted effort not only from government, but also a commitment from Romanian society itself.

Dennis Deletant is Visiting Ion Ratiu Professor of Romanian Studies at Georgetown University and Emeritus Professor of Romanian Studies at the School of Slavonic and East European Studies, University College, London. An officer of the Order of the British Empire (since 1995) and a recipient of Order of Merit with the rank of commander for services to Romanian democracy (since 2000), Deletant is the author of several volumes on the recent history of Romania, including Ceauşescu and the Securitate: Coercion and Dissent in Romania, 1965-89 (1996), Romania under Communist Rule (1998), Communist Terror in British Clandestine Operations in Romania, 1940-44.
